Students. Employees. Parents. Public activists. School entities must be responsive to many different groups.

As local government agencies, schools are subject to the often-conflicting demands of constitutional and civil rights possessed by different constituents. Additionally, staff conduct can be scrutinized under the lens of constitutional and civil rights analysis, resulting in both institutional and individual liability. Defending against claims of constitutional deprivations begins with excellent legal counsel and initial risk-avoidance advice.

Unfortunately, litigation still frequently occurs despite risk-avoidance measures and sound school leadership. When our clients are sued, our firm draws on its collective years of substantive experience and teams it with our litigation experience. Our goal is to aggressively defend our clients at all stages in the litigation process in a cost-effective and outcome driven manner. Our attorneys are proven litigators willing to fight for our clients' interests.
